Boston is a great place to celebrate!...

Boston is a great American city, steeped in the history of the American Revolution. A walk along the 2.5 mile Freedom Trail leads tourists to 16 landmarks that paint a story of a fight for freedom. Today, Boston is about first-rate educational institutions and world-class museums. The Back Bay, where the Marriott Copley Place is located, is a foodie’s paradise. Trendy restaurants mingle with old-time favorites. The area is remarkably walkable, though in November you may want to pack your mukluks. MESA celebrated its 20th and 40th anniversaries in Boston and we find ourselves in that fabulous city again, celebrating 50!

This year’s meeting schedule was modified to accommodate a larger program. Panels will now be 1.75 hours long rather than 2, with only 15 minutes in between them, and there will be 14 panel sessions rather than 12. The program includes more than 300 sessions. Compare that to 127 in 1986, 125 in 1996, and 180 in 2006.

The book bazaar will operate on a different schedule as well. It will be open on Thursday, November 17 from 4-7pm and on Friday and Saturday from 8:30am-5:30pm. It will be closed on Sunday. That change was due to union regulations that made the cost of breaking the exhibit down on Sunday untenable.

This year, we will kick-off the meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30pm with the MESA Presidential Address & Awards Ceremony. Panel sessions will run Friday morning through Sunday afternoon.

The pages that follow provide detailed information about the meeting. We recommend booking your hotel room immediately to avoid the possibility of ending up in an overflow property. Be sure to book through the provided link, and just say no to any company that says they have anything to do with making reservations for the MESA meeting. They do not.

50 is a good start...

When MESA members gather in Boston in November they will do so on a momentus occasion, the 50th anniversary of the founding of their association. The 51 founders undoubtedly would be delighted at the success of the entity that they envisioned and created. They held the notion that a society that brought together people who studied a curious region would offset the immense isolation they felt within their disciplines. And that, it did.

MESA has endured over the years because of the people who cared about it. All the men and women who volunteered to serve on the board of directors and on the many MESA committees were stewards of the association, as were the longtime members who joined as young scholars and maintained their membership over the course of their careers. They were committed because they saw purpose in MESA’s mission as “a non-political association that fosters the study of the Middle East, promotes high standards of scholarship and teaching, and encourages public understanding of the region and its peoples through programs, publications and services that enhance education, further intellectual exchange, recognize professional distinction, and defend academic freedom.”

Even at 50, MESA’s story is remarkably young. How the association will look in 50 years rests on the shoulders of a new generation of scholars who came into their own in a very different technological age, one that offers new an interesting modes of interaction, of information gathering and sharing, and one that surely poses new opportunities and challenges for an academic society.

Book Bazaar

The MESA Book Bazaar will be located in the Back Bay Conference and Exhibition Center on the 3rd Floor. Arguably the largest display of Middle East studies titles anywhere, MESA’s annual book bazaar will include old and new friends—university presses, small publishing houses, independent book sellers, and even artisans sharing their talents. All will gather in Boston for a three-day festival of books. The book bazaar will be open 4-7 Thursday, Nov. 17 and 8:30am-5:30pm Friday and Saturday (Nov. 18-19). It will not be open on Sunday, Nov. 20. Visit MESA’s website for a list of exhibitors.

You do not have to rent space to exhibit at the MESA meeting. For $40 per title, publications can be placed on view in MESA’s Cooperative Book Display. This is an ideal arrangement for individuals, independent authors, and small presses with few Middle East studies titles.

If you would like additional information about exhibiting at MESA 2016, please visit MESA’s website or contact Rose Veneklasen at rose@mesana.org or 520-333-2577 ext. 102.

Roommates

If you are interested in sharing a room at the Boston Marriott Copley Place during the MESA annual meeting, please visit MESA’s website at http://mesana.org/annual-meeting/roommates.html. MESA maintains a “roommates wanted” page on its website where those wanting to share rooms can find each other.

Child Care

MESA can help parents find a local provider and will reimburse half of the cost of day care services up to a maximum of $200 for the conference. Upon request, the Secretariat will be happy to post contact information of parents who want to share sitting services during the meeting. For further information, please contact Rose Veneklasen at rose@mesana.org or 520-333-2577 ext. 102.

The members meeting is an annual meeting of the membership open to all members. Voting is restricted to full and student MESA members. The meeting mainly consists of reports (see agenda at right). Where members play an important role is in voting for the Nominating Committee and on any resolutions that are being presented. A member in good standing can add names to the list of people who will be invited to run for the Nominating Committee, to augment those proposed by MESA’s Board.

Quorum
A minimum of 35 voting-eligible members must be in attendance for votes to be taken. Failing that, the meeting can be held but votes cannot be taken.

Resolutions
When important issues are before the membership, resolutions are sometimes presented at the members meeting. Resolutions can originate from MESA’s Board or from the membership. For resolutions to be acted upon at the 2016 Members Meeting, they must be in the hands of the MESA Secretariat by November 3, 2016. Instructions for submitting resolutions can be found in MESA’s Bylaws which are posted on MESA’s website at mesana.org.

Tools for Paper Presenters

Upload Your Paper to myMESA by Oct. 15

Please upload a copy of your paper to the myMESA system so that your co-panelists, especially the chair/discussant, will have access to it. No one else will be able to view your paper except for your co-panelists. Papers need not be the final copy; drafts are fine. There is no suggested paper length. Your topic and your depth of coverage should determine its length. Plan to present a truncated version of your paper at your panel.

2. Click the “Annual Meeting” button.
3. Click the “Paper Abstract” button below that.
4. Click the “Submit/Update full paper” button.
5. Under “Upload your attachment” click the “browse” button.
6. Locate the file on your computer by navigating to the directory where the file is located.
7. Once the name of your file appears in the box next to the “browse” button, click the “Save and back to abstract” button.
8. Your file has now been uploaded.

Want to upload a newer copy later? Repeat above.

Planning for Your Presentation

If you are planning a career in academia, the art of presenting a conference paper is a skill you can and will need to learn. James Gelvin, professor of history at UCLA, kindly made available to MESA tips he shared with his graduate students on preparing and delivering conference papers: http://mesana.org/pdf/preparing-and-delivering-conference-papers-Gelvin.pdf. As you will learn, there are many factors involved in writing a scholarly paper and presenting it at a conference. The bottom line is that preparation is key to a successful presentation and to combating nerves.

No Show Policy

We understand that things come up at the last minute that prevent a participant from attending the meeting. As a courtesy to your co-panelists, please notify MESA if you cannot attend the meeting. If you are scheduled to participate in the annual meeting in any capacity and you don’t show up and haven’t informed the MESA Secretariat, you will be considered a ‘no-show’ and will not be eligible to participate in the next year’s meeting. A no-show is someone who is not physically present at his/her panel at the conference and hasn’t notified the MESA Secretariat beforehand.
There is a MESA tradition of a president writing about her or his path into the field. Although I was very tempted to break with this tradition (writing about one’s own intellectual trajectory at a time when the MENA region faces such unprecedented challenges seemed a bit too self-indulgent), I have been persuaded otherwise. It is precisely at such precarious times that we may need to be reminded of why we do what we do—produce scholarship, teach courses, and give public lectures—and how we got here.

Before I had ever heard of Title VI, the federal monies that support Middle East studies across the country, I had become familiar with Title IX, the legislation that prohibits sexual discrimination in education. As a high school athlete who grew up close to New York City, I fought for equal access to playing fields, courts, coaching, and equipment, having learned rather early on that female athletes were considered inferior to male athletes. This battle continued into college, where at Dartmouth, a traditionally all male institution that had recently gone co-ed, I played Division I soccer, fighting once more for fair treatment on and off the field.

Having gone to college with the intention of studying medicine—biology had been a favorite subject—I quickly found that history courses appealed much more than the required ones in chemistry. The smell of the stacks proved intoxicating, the lectures spellbinding, and I got hooked on historical research. For it was through history, particularly social history, that I began to make sense of the gender and other inequities I had experienced or witnessed growing up. Racial conflict had marked my junior high and high school years, and religious discrimination had been a theme in family conversations. Explorations of the past gave these issues historical context and pointed the way to overcoming inequality through social movements.

At college, an early interest in Jewish and Israeli history metamorphosed into an interest in Middle Eastern history writ large. Until then I had not visited the region and only later learned of family ties: a great grandfather had been born in Istanbul in the 1860s. This great grandfather, who arrived in the U.S. in the 1890s, is described in an oral history as “a very dark skinned Turkish looking man with a big black moustache.” He only gave up his Ottoman citizenship when the empire allied with Germany in World War I, and it was probably then that my family created the myth that he was Russian to hide his Ottoman past.

In a world of binaries, I always assumed that I was white, that is until I travelled to London to study for my MA at the School of Oriental and African Studies. There, in the United Kingdom, many people thought of me as something else, not black but not white either. Among other things, I apprehended how fluid and constructed identity could be and saw how a contracting empire that had drawn many of its former colonized people to its shores treated them. Learning to navigate the city and archives at the center of the British Empire, an empire that played such a dominant role in the Middle East, would prove as invaluable as the analytical skills that Malcolm Yapp imparted to his students.

At UCLA, I settled on Egypt as the focus of my studies, in part because of the intriguing questions on gender that presented themselves in modern Egyptian history, in part because it was one of the few places I could conduct research. When I finally got out into the field to study Arabic and collect sources, I often got mistaken for being Egyptian, a mistake that left me in a liminal space, forced to learn and sometimes to follow the codes and expectations for proper gendered behavior. I had gone into the field with a comparative project and the intention of spending two weeks at Dar al-Kutub reading periodicals produced or authored by women. The weeks turned into months, as I changed my research topic—the Arabic women’s press became both the subject and main source of my dissertation.

Following in the footsteps of my teachers Gene Garthwaite and Nikki Keddie, my work has focused on social history. This thread has wound its way through my writing on literary culture and society, gender and representations of the nation, and religion and social welfare. In my research, I have looked for the marginalized or forgotten, arguing that their stories are key to understanding the past. Whether writing about activists and intellectuals, enslaved Africans and Circassians, orphaned and abandoned children, or missionaries and Islamists, I have strived to give voice to those less often heard.

Having moved from London to LA to Cairo in the course of graduate studies, I ended up back in New York with a teaching position at City College, City University of New York. Teaching there, on the frontlines in a public university with limited resources has not been easy. But it has been rewarding: City College prides itself on having the most diverse student body in the country, and its location in the heart of Harlem positions it at the crossroads of fascinating cultural, political, and economic currents. It has been a tremendous privilege to serve students who take nothing for granted, who value an education that they have fought hard to get, and who bring to class discussions incredible experiences and insights. My students and colleagues, as well as the graduate students who have taught alongside me, have inspired me and affirmed the importance of teaching. At the same time, it has pained me to see the ever widening gap in resources between public universities starved of funds and private institutions awash in them.

Working in New York City has also offered a unique perspective on events that have come to define our times: the seeds of the “war on terror” were sown here with the attacks of 9/11 and the drumbeats for the subsequent war in Iraq played out at the UN. In early September 2001, right before the toppling of the towers, the trustees of CUNY approved the launching of a Middle East and Middle Eastern American Center at the CUNY Graduate Center. Building MEMEAC with Anny Bakalian, and having the opportunity to foster a close community of scholars and nurture a generation of talented MA and PhD students, has been enormously gratifying.

The presence of a vibrant Middle East center made it possible to host IJMES at the Graduate Center. Editing the journal from 2009 to 2014 with Sara Pursley and Jeffrey Culang, the best partners imaginable, was an exhilarating endeavor. It was also exhausting, and life after IJMES was supposed to be more relaxed. I planned to take time off, learn to meditate, and return to my own scholarship, pursuing a new project that brings me full circle (a social history of medicine in Egypt). I’d also hoped for more time on the hiking trail. But that is not quite how it turned out.

The MESA presidency, I thought, was mostly an honorary position. I was wrong. Our international community of scholars and students is under siege, with some in real peril. This is a time of action: of speaking out on behalf of academic freedom and unfettered debate; of striving to create opportunities at universities for those Middle Eastern scholars and students whose work and lives are at risk in Turkey, Syria, and elsewhere; of condemning sexual harassment and violence in the academy and working to end it; and of standing by our commitment to produce the best scholarship that we can and recognize it in new ways.
Midway through the summer, the FilmFest is hard at work preparing for Boston. With over 140 films under consideration, we are trying to pare about 100 hours of video down to the 38 hours we will show. Some new and uncommon topics join the historical, political, and cultural subjects. We will have something for almost every taste whether you’re looking for something new for the classroom or just a break from panels. Here is a sampling of some films viewers will find on the program.

In the Image: Palestinian Women Capture the Occupation

In the Image: Palestinian Women Capture the Occupation is a documentary about West Bankers who partner with the Israeli human rights organization, B’Tselem. Their project provides video cameras and training to young women who use them to capture violations of Palestinian’s civil rights by settlers and the military as well as the nuances of living under occupation. Blending interviews with camera women and the footage they have filmed, this video introduces these non-violent activists, humanizes them and sheds light on the complicated situations that have become daily life for Palestinian citizens living in the occupied territories.

Iraqi Odyssey

Samir (Jamal al-Din) is an Iraqi-Swiss filmmaker whose large extended Iraqi family is today scattered around the world but historically his kin played important roles in the history of their ancestral homeland. Iraqi Odyssey recounts his family’s stories as it chronicles Iraqis’ dreams of building a modern society after their nation achieved independence in the 1950s. Although coups in the 1960s and 1970s dashed these aspirations, some of his relatives continued to pursue their political ambitions. During Saddam Hussein’s dictatorship and Iraq’s post-war transition, the family’s concern for their homeland has endured. Iraqi Odyssey was Switzerland’s entry for the 2014 Academy Award Best Foreign Language film. The FilmFest will show the classroom length version.

The Occupation of the American Mind: Israel’s Public Relations War in the United States

Israel’s military occupation of Palestinian territory and repeated invasions of the Gaza Strip have triggered a fierce backlash against Israeli policies virtually everywhere in the world—except the United States. The Occupation of the American Mind addresses this critical exception by focusing on pro-Israel public relations efforts within the U.S. Drawing on analyses of Israel’s decades-long battle for American hearts, minds and tax dollars, this video investigates how the Israeli government, the U.S. government, and the pro-Israel lobby have joined forces, often with very different motives, to shape American media coverage of the conflict in Israel’s favor.
Letters From Baghdad

The FilmFest will have a “sneak preview” of Letters From Baghdad, the story of Gertrude Bell, the adventurer, diplomat, archaeologist and spy who traveled widely in the Middle East at the beginning of the 20th century. Drawing on archival film and letters, this documentary traces Bell’s unlikely rise within British military intelligence. In the process, she was instrumental in shaping the future of post-Ottoman Iraq, installing its first king and establishing the Iraq Museum. Beyond her colonial and political accomplishments, Letters From Baghdad reveals that Bell was an explorer caught between two cultures and always in search of her place.

The Tentmakers of Cairo

In a small covered market, in the heart of Old Islamic Cairo, four tentmakers expertly hand stitch Khayamiya or appliqué. Historically, Khayamiya decorated the interiors of tents but today are wall hangings and cushion covers often adorning tourists’ homes. The Tentmakers of Cairo provides a unique look at the techniques of this traditional craft at a time when this art form is gaining international popularity and recognition even as its appeal is waning in Egypt. Filmed between 2011 and 2014 – from the departure of Hosni Mubarak through the brief reign of Muhammad Morsi – viewers gain insights into local opinions about the uncertain political situation and the collapse of the tourist industry.

After Spring

Close to 80,000 Syrian exiles lives in the Za’atari Refugee Camp in Jordan, the second largest such camp in the world. More than half of the camp’s inhabitants are children. After Spring gives viewers an intimate portrait of the rhythms of the camp, the role of the aid workers and the daily lives of two families as they contemplate an uncertain future. All aspects of refugee camp life are explored, including medical assistance, the self-sustaining economy of its urban center, martial arts classes and even pizza making. However, it all arcs on bringing purpose and education to the children uprooted from their homes, often termed the ‘lost generation.’

Undergraduate Research Poster Session

MESA’s Committee on Undergraduate Middle East Studies presents an Undergraduate Research Poster Session

Prior to the poster session, the undergraduate students will participate in a workshop meant to hone their research skills by focusing on placing their work in the academic literature, developing research methods, and exposing students to data, archives, and other primary sources in Middle East studies. MESA 2016 attendees are invited to the poster session to engage these young scholars in a discussion of their research.

SPECIAL SESSION

4711 BDS, MESA, and the Politics of Academic Associations
Organizers: Samera Esmeir, Joshua Stacher, Kent State, Sherene Seikaly, UC Santa Barbara

Chair: Samera Esmeir, UC Berkeley

Michelle Hartman, McGill
Charles Hirschkind, UC Berkeley
Huri İslamoğlu, Bogazici
Mary N. Layoun, Wisconsin Madison
Judith E. Tucker, Georgetown

The Boycott Divestment Sanctions (BDS) movement began over a decade ago as a Palestinian initiative that made three demands: ending the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, the full and equal rights of Palestinian citizens in Israel, and the implementation of the Palestinian right of return. Since then, BDS has been widely discussed in academic circles in North America and Western Europe. Across universities throughout North America and Europe, undergraduate and graduate students, alongside faculty, have critically engaged this strategy. Numerous student unions, scholars, and academic associations adopted BDS. In turn, there was significant political pressure on academic institutions to disavow the strategy. The engagement with BDS has given rise to various questions of who has “academic freedom”; what is “free speech”; and what is “objectivity.” These questions unfolded just as the erosion of higher education, the corporatization of the university, the adjunctification of academic labor, and the general precarity of academic work took hold in new ways. At this critical juncture and as several hundred MESA members have signed calls for academic boycott, this panel explores BDS as a political and intellectual strategy as it relates to academic associations in general, and to MESA in particular. The panel reflects on the relationship between producing knowledge and practicing politics in Middle East studies. The panelists, representing different areas of expertise in Middle East studies, offer insights on the practice of BDS, its significance and interventions in the contemporary higher education system, the relationship between politics and scholarship, and question of responsibility. They also reflect on the role of and the pressures on MESA in particular and academic associations more broadly. This panel contributes to an important and unfinished conversation that has been taking place among MESA members, affording them access to a wide range of opinions within their organization.

The events that culminated in the Arab uprisings of 2011 markedly altered analyses of Arab-region politics. While countries that constitute the Middle East and North Africa have—and continue to be - home to some of the world’s longest standing authoritarian regimes, the uprisings and revolutions challenged previous notions of authoritarian durability as republics, monarchies, secular, and theocratic countries across the region experienced varying degrees of instability sparked by protest movements calling for socio-economic and political change to the authoritarian status quo. Beginning in Tunisia late 2010 and quickly spreading to Egypt, and Morocco, Bahrain, Libya, Syria, and Yemen, the uprisings differed greatly in degree and scope resulting in divergent outcomes for the people and places of the region. Although the events initially created a shockwave throughout the region as governments, previously impervious to change, grappled with containing domestic threats to their stability from their citizens, responses varied drastically. While some regimes were overthrown following decades of rule, others acquiesced to citizen demands by engaging in various concession-making processes, others heavily suppressed the protest movements in order to maintain their hold on power, and in the case of Egypt, experienced re-emergent authoritarianism following regime change. A critical question remains: What explains divergent outcomes? This Special Session gathers leading experts in order to explain the processes and dynamics of change and stagnation of the Arab Spring.

4713 Proposal Writing and Research Design: How To Fund Your Ideas
Organizer: Suad Joseph

Sponsored by MESA GSO, EWIC Outreach Project, Arab American Studies Association, Association for Middle East Anthropology, and the Association for Middle East Women’s Studies

Chair: Suad Joseph, UC Davis

Those embarking on academic careers must master the art of writing proposals for research funding. Whether you are conducting research for a dissertation or book or seeking support for a special project-locating and securing funding is critical. This workshop will provide expert guidelines on how to write compelling proposals from the initial phrasing of the research question, step by step, to the research outcomes, significance, dissemination, and public outreach. It will also address such issues as identifying and working with funding agencies, effectively communicating research methodology and goals, preparing budgets, and planning for the dissemination of results. The workshop will be led by Suad Joseph, Professor of Anthropology and Women and Gender Studies, University of California at Davis. She has taught proposal writing and lead workshops for students, faculty, administrators, and NGO practitioners for over 30 years. Information about proposal writing may be found on Dr. Joseph’s website at http://sjoseph.ucdavis.edu/arab-families-working-group-1/images/files/ComponentsofSocialSciencesResearchProposal.pdf. Please sign up for the workshop in advance by sending an email message to Mark Lowder at mark@mesana.org. Before the workshop, please browse Professor Joseph’s website and read the document, “Components of a social science and humanities research proposal.”

While most academic institutions prepare their students for academic careers, other viable options include joining the public service. Approximately 20 percent of federal employees have a master’s degree, professional degree or doctorate, and about one in four American Nobel laureates have been federal employees. This panel discusses how joining the public service at the U.S. Department of State can be an opportunity to work on high priority issues that impact diplomacy, security, and prosperity in the world, including human rights, environment, energy, food security, public health, and technology – all while experiencing a unique career. The panel will examine the various career opportunities and challenges to joining the foreign service (FSO) or the civil service, as well as the pathways programs for students.

MESA’s Committee on Academic Freedom monitors the entire region for cases of academic freedom violations. While CAF’s work has long been overwhelmingly in defense of individuals suffering from or threatened by loss of academic job, compromised access to research or travel, or worse, in recent years, the committee has increasingly been dealing with broader assaults against academic freedom. While the worst examples have been in countries where conflict has led to massive destruction of facilities and loss of life, we have also seen country cases in which there have been increasingly widespread violations absent such dire security challenges. While the general climate relating to freedom of expression has been deteriorating across the region, Turkey and Egypt stand out as particularly notable examples of increasingly vicious state repression against academic freedom. While the worst examples have been in countries where conflict has led to massive destruction of facilities and loss of life, we have also seen country cases in which there have been increasingly widespread violations absent such dire security challenges. While the general climate relating to freedom of expression has been deteriorating across the region, Turkey and Egypt stand out as particularly notable examples of increasingly vicious state repression against academic freedom in its various manifestations. In Egypt, the continuing uncertainty of the political transition in the context of a brutal military-security regime has produced a dangerous academic and research terrain in which former red lines are shifting or have blurred. In Turkey, against the backdrop of an already clear authoritarian turn, in mid-January the government has launched a wave of administrative, judicial and security assaults in the wake of the publication of the now famous Peace Petition regarding the escalating violence in the country’s southeast. In CAF’s experience, the criminalization of all 1,128 academic signatories of this Petition, and the arrests, dismissals and threats to which the signers were subjected, represented the broadest targeted assault against academics that we had ever seen—until the even more far-reaching and staggering developments since the 15 July coup attempt. This roundtable brings together four top scholars who have or are working with CAF, and who have been monitoring closely and writing about the deterioration in these freedoms. Their interventions will seek to place the recent developments in broader socio-political and historical context, removing developments in the academy from what is often their relative isolation and analyzing them as integral parts of ongoing political transitions.

Sexual harassment of students and faculty is not a new problem in the academy. This problem is especially acute for graduate students and junior faculty across fields of study. Research suggests that 30% of graduate students surveyed stated that they experienced some form of sexual harassment in the course of their study. This finding has remained consistent over the past three decades. A new wave of survivor-led student activism in the United States has forced colleges and universities to review their existing policies on sexual harassment and sexual assault. However, the issue of faculty harassers has been largely ignored.

Professional associations like MESA can play a role by facilitating discussion of these issues. Participants will analyze the problem of sexual harassment in the academy, examine possible responses to the problem, explore the establishment of a code of conduct for MESA, and share resources designed to raise awareness among faculty and students.

Lakhdar Brahimi has been Algeria’s Foreign Minister (1991-1993) and its Ambassador to Egypt, Sudan and the Arab League of States in Cairo (1963-1970) and to The United Kingdom (1971-1979). From 1984 to 1991, He served as Under-Secretary General of the League of Arab States. During that time, he negotiated the Taef Agreement, which put an end to the Civil War in Lebanon that had lasted 15 years.

During his country’s struggle for independence, Brahimi represented Algeria’s National Liberation Front in Indonesia (1956-1961). He took part in the work of the Non-Aligned Movement, since its first Conference, in 1961, in Belgrade, and in that of the Organization of African Unity (now the African Union), since its creation, in 1963.

After retirement from national public service, in 1993, he started a new career with the United Nations. After undertaking a number of missions on behalf of the Secretary General of the United Nations, he led the United Nations Observer Mission to South Africa (UNOMSA), which observed South Africa’s historic democratic election, which ended Apartheid and brought Mandela to power. He also led UN Missions to Haiti (1994-1996) and to Afghanistan (1997-1999).

In 2000, he chaired an Independent Panel on UN Peace Operations, which produced a report on how to improve UN action in its core activity, which is the maintenance and restoration of Peace and Security in the World. (The report is commonly known as the “Brahimi Report”).

In 2001, following the 09/11 terrorist attacks, he chaired the Bonn Conference on Afghanistan and went on to lead the United Nations Assistance Mission for Afghanistan (UNAMA). In 2004, following the invasion and occupation of Iraq, he helped form a national government with the mandate of restoring the sovereignty of that unhappy country.

In 2007, Brahimi was asked to chair another Independent Panel, which produced a report on how to protect UN staff and property around the world. He was then again called back to be the Joint Special Representative of the United Nations and the League of Arab States for Syria (2012-2014).

Ambassador Brahimi studied Law and Political Science in Algiers and Paris, but left without graduating to join his country’s struggle for independence.

He was awarded Doctorates Honoris Causa from (in the order in which they were granted):
The American University of Beirut, in Lebanon; The University of Oxford, in the UK; The University of Nice, in France; The University of Bologna in Italy; The University of the Free State, in South Africa, The Institut d’Etudes Politiques of Paris, in France

Lakhdar Brahimi is currently a member of The Elders and a number of civil society organizations and has been active in various associations with leading Universities and Institutes.

Lakhdar Brahimi is married, with three children and 6 grand children.

Turkey’s political history has been dotted with successful military coups, but the attempted coup in Turkey in July failed spectacularly. It was followed by the imprisonment of those accused of leading or taking part in the coup, as well as purges of thousands of Turkish citizens across various domains - the military, media, academia, the arts, and the judiciary. While the Erdogan government continues to defend its response to the attempted coup, the world has watched with concern as people lose their jobs, or are accused of having supported the coup, in a seemingly indiscriminate manner. At stake is Turkey’s democracy – which, paradoxically, was claimed by the coup-makers, the government, members of Erdogan’s ruling party, and those in civil society who opposed Turkey’s coup but also oppose Erdogan’s authoritarianism. From a feminist perspective, the coup and its aftermath revealed a type of “clash of hyper-masculinities”. The ongoing conflict between the Turkish state and its military, on the one hand, and Kurdish militants (the PKK and the YPG) on the other, adds another dimension to Turkey’s gendered crisis of democracy. These complex issues will be discussed by a distinguished group of panelists, who will approach the crisis from within varied disciplinary and conceptual frameworks.
